THE GREAT RESIGNATION: GET AHEAD WITH THESE HIRING TIPS

Having trouble finding and retaining talent? It’s a tough time for hiring, especially in IT. Check out these three ways to ease the hiring challenges of The Great Resignation and help your organization come out stronger than ever.

1. RESKILL AND UPSKILL YOUR EXISTING TALENT

Hiring new talent is time consuming and potentially risky, especially if the new hire doesn’t last. With so much workforce attrition, reskilling and upskilling existing talent through training is a practical solution. You have talented team members, so set them up for success by training them on new, in-demand technologies!

2. PROVIDE FLEXIBLE TRAINING OPTIONS

Offering flexible, technology-driven learning options is essential for today’s workplace. The ability to learn new and useful skills anytime, anywhere empowers individuals and organizations alike.

3. GIVE YOUR WORKFORCE THE OPPORTUNITY TO INVEST IN PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT

The Great Resignation provides an opportunity for individuals to reflect on their personal lives and skillsets, so give them the resources to do so! “Power skills” like emotional intelligence (meaning traits like self-awareness, empathy, and emotional skills) are vital in today’s people-centric workplace. Pairing new skills with emotional intelligence will help separate your team from the rest.
